Kings and Queens, astronomers and clock makers, admirals and sailors, bankers and media types. Everyone has found something special about living in Greenwich.

Now it's your turn.

Look out over
1,000 years
of history

Greenwich has always been an attractive location

- It is home to London's first Royal Park.
- Ocean navigation came of age with the Greenwich Meridian.
- Both Henry VIII and Elizabeth I were born in the Royal Palace.
- The National Maritime Museum, Old Naval College, Cutty Sark and Gypsy Moth stand as proud testament to Greenwich's maritime history.

- It was in Greenwich that the Royal Observatory created the accurate star charts and clocks that helped sailors circumnavigate the globe and made Greenwich the place that the world set its watch by.

No wonder UNESCO has declared Greenwich a World Heritage Site.

LONDON ON YOUR DOORSTEP

Greenwich Creekside is efficiently served for transport links. Canary Wharf is just 9 minutes away and the City is accessible within a short 20 minute journey. The Docklands Light Railway, Jubilee Line and National Rail all run through Greenwich. London City Airport and the Eurostar terminal offer handy access for international travel. You can walk under the river to docklands via the foot tunnel or climb aboard and take the river taxi to reach your destination.

Just beyond Greenwich is the South Circular, offering easy road connections to the motorways of Kent and the south coast.

The 2012 Olympics in Greenwich

Greenwich will host no less than 13 events in the 2012 games, including basketball, gymnastics, pentathlon, equestrian and shooting. Greenwich Creekside offers easy access to all the events throughout the Borough as well as quick and easy transport links to the main Olympic Village in Stratford.

The eyes of the world will be on Greenwich for the duration of the games, making this an even more attractive location for your home.

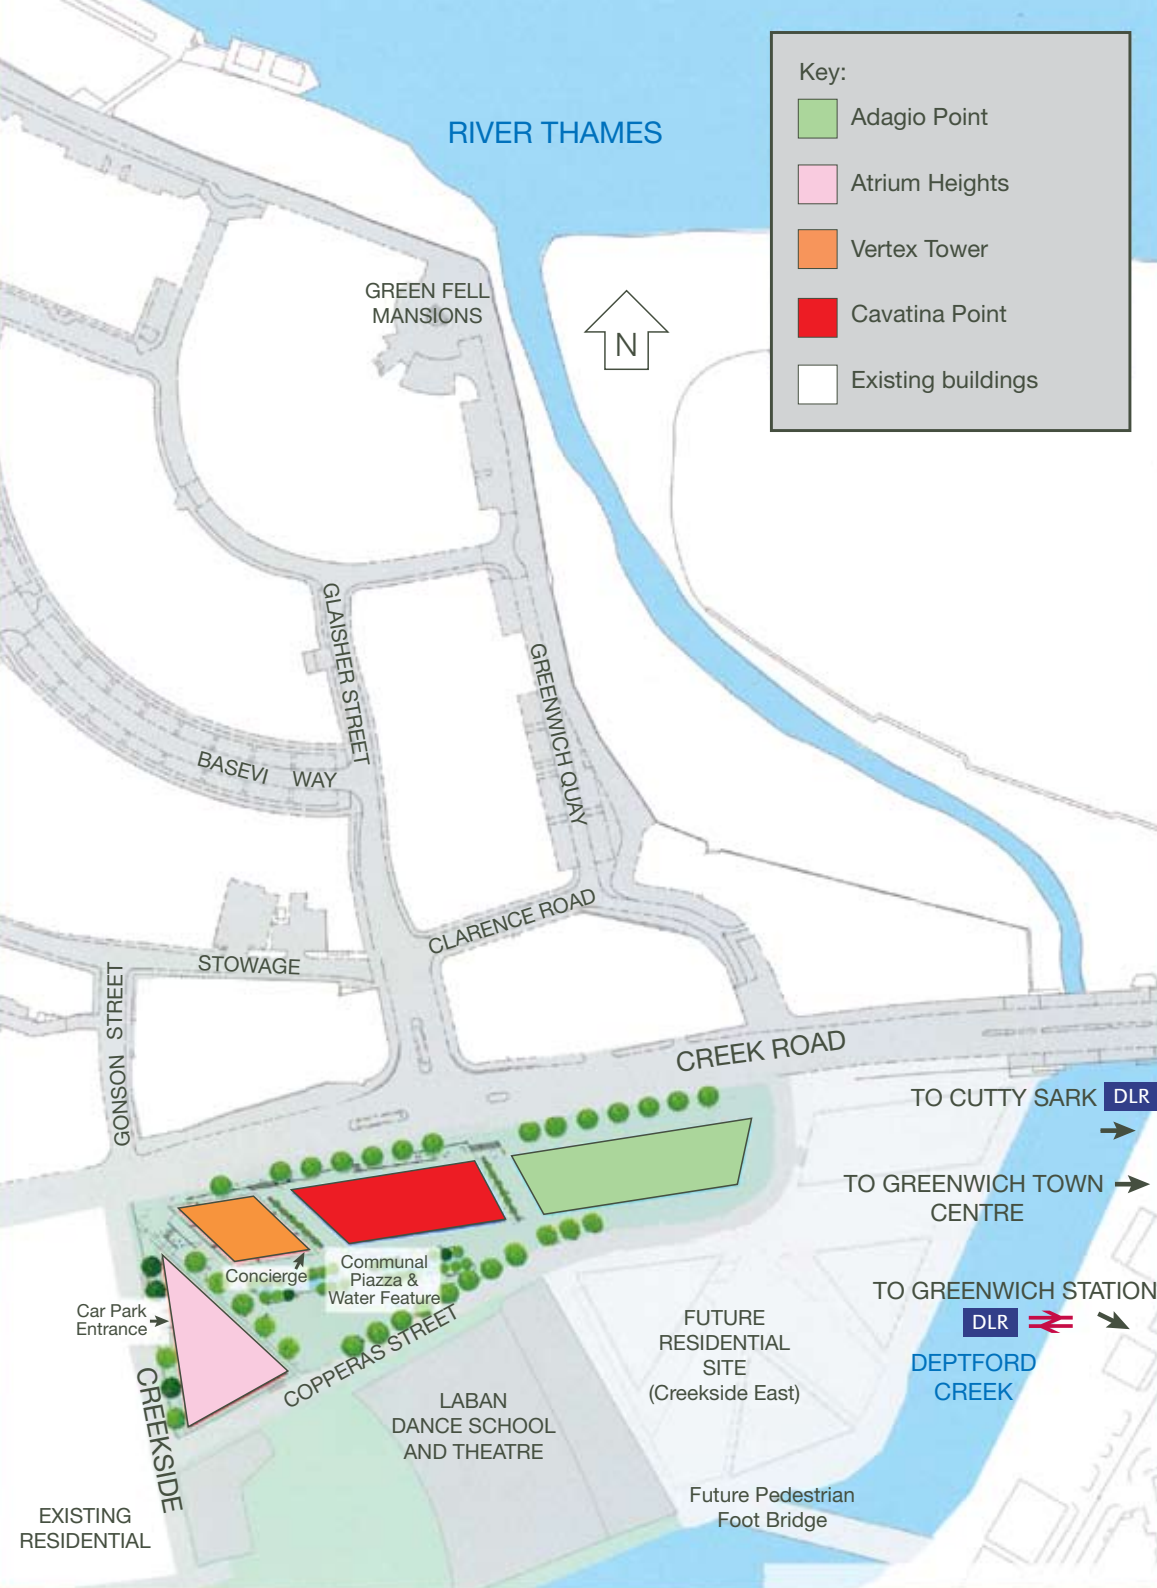

Maybe it's the fabulous riverside location? Perhaps it's the wonderful historic buildings and sailing boats? Or is it the fact that Greenwich has managed to preserve that sense you are in a village, right in the middle of London?

Whatever the reason, Greenwich has a spirit and excitement that makes it unique. By day you can wander around some of London's most historic buildings, browse fascinating local shops or stroll through the park, admiring the deer.

At night, you can choose between a fabulous selection of entertainment, including one of the world's greatest music venues, the O2 Arena, thriving live theatre, clubs, bars, restaurants and traditional riverside pubs.

Greenwich has a buzz all of its own
